

These scams are the most successful at tricking South Africans out of their money

Fraudsters and scammers have become increasingly creative in stealing people's identities and money, with tricks that could fool even the most vigilant.

With the dawn of the digital age, the number of ways unsuspecting businesses and individuals can be tricked and robbed has grown.

However, there are still a few scams that are more common than others and cause the most problems.

MyBroadband contacted all of South Africa's major banks to find out which scams are causing the most harm — including Absa, Capitec, FNB, Nedbank, Standard Bank, Bank Zero, Discovery Bank, and TymeBank.

The old favourite of scams among fraudsters is phishing. It's a con to try and get a target to hand over their PIN and password to criminals.

Phishing messages can come over any text medium, whether WhatsApp, email, or SMS.

Any response to this false communication is potentially dangerous.

Instead, if you receive a message or email asking for account details, don't respond or click on any links. Rather contact your bank directly to verify whether there is an issue.

It is important to note that banks will never ask for information beyond basic account details. If someone asks for your PIN, card number, or one-time PIN sent on your phone, you should immediately know something isn't right.

Vishing is a variant of this scam. It uses the same approach as phishing but involves a voice call where the scammer will ask for a one-time PIN just sent to your phone.

Ironically, they will often masquerade as someone from the fraud department trying to stop a fraudulent transaction on your account.

The scammer will make the call sound urgent to try and make you provide information out of fear and concern.

An example of this in South Africa is a recent variant of SIM-swap fraud.

Another prolific scam is through a change of banking details communications — sometimes as part of a larger business email compromise attack.

A scammer will send a message indicating that a business or person's banking details have changed.

Their goal is to have you make transfers to this new fraudulent account rather than the actual account.

Like with phishing, the easiest way to combat this is to contact the person or company you are paying to confirm any changes directly.

Remember not to use the phone number in the potential fraudster's email if you're paying an organisation — get it directly from their website or another independent source.

Deposit and social media scams follow a similar strategy.

Also referred to as advance-fee fraud, this is when scammers offer an enticing deal and ask for a deposit or investment.

Once payment is received, you won't hear from them again.

Avoiding such scams requires making inquiries about the deal, and the person or company offering it.

This includes checking comparable goods or services and directly contacting the business or company making the offer.

If you can't find reliable information about it, it's probably a scam.

In summary, the best way to recognise the most widespread scams is through verification.

Reach out to your bank directly, call the business in question, and never approve anything or provide financial details immediately.

If your searches turn up anything that smells remotely fishy, pass on the offer. Something that's too good to be true usually is.

If you think there's something suspicious, you should also contact your bank's fraud line — all banks have one.

As rife as scams are, most can be avoided with a bit of caution, common sense, and by working with your bank, said FNB digital banking head Giuseppe Virgillito.

"The simplest way for consumers and businesses to support fraud prevention is to pay attention to fraud education and updates from service providers," Virgillito said. □

Dear Friends.

May has arrived and the days are becoming cooler especially in the early morning and evening. We also find especially this time of the year that aches and pains are making themselves felt. As much as we try to fight the signs and symptoms of aging, some foes are greater than others, the most common one being back pain. Although uncomfortable at first, research has shown that exercise might be the most effective method of treating lower back pain.

Fuel prices are really starting to bite these days not only because of the price per litre at the pump, but because of the huge knock-on effect we are finding when buying our groceries. Just compare your weekly shopping for this month to that of last year and you will see what I mean.

Just a thought: Like everyone these days, cutting costs and reducing expenses is a way of life and the Olive Branch is no exception. I encourage more residents to consider having the newsletter sent to their computers, tablets or smartphones rather than having printed copies delivered to their post boxes. This will reduce the printing costs. Send me your e-mail address and I will add you to the mailing list if it is not already there.

Enjoy the wonderful articles we have put together and the lovely pictures that we and other residents have taken.

Wishing all moms a fabulous Mother's Day full of recreation, relaxation, and appreciation! ☐

Flu Season

While the flu vaccine is the best defence, there are a number of ways you can protect yourself against the flu through your health and lifestyle.

1. Wash or sanitise hands thoroughly and often

Make sure to clean under your nails, backs of hands, between fingers, and wrists. Rub your hands together for at least 30 seconds with soap or hand sanitiser to eliminate germs.

2. Exercise regularly

Moderate exercise boosts your immune system and benefits your body greatly. This could reduce the risk of a cold by a third.

3. Avoid touching the eyes, nose, and mouth

We often touch our faces without thinking, but especially during flu season, this is a common way for germs to enter the body.

4. Clean your environment to eliminate germs

Try to keep your surroundings as clean as possible. Use disinfectant when cleaning during the flu season, especially in the bathroom and kitchen, paying close attention to doorknobs, light switches and counters.

5. Stay away from people who are sick

Protect yourself by keeping your distance. Limit contact and avoid unnecessary touching like shaking hands or hugging.

6. Drink plenty of fluids

Drink plenty of liquids, especially plain water.

7. Eat nutritious foods

Vitamin C has been shown to reduce the risk of getting sick. Get some extra Vitamin C naturally by eating more citrus fruits, strawberries, kiwi and dark leafy greens.

8. Protecting others

Always cover your mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing to stop the spread of germs. Put used tissues straight into the bin and wash your hands. Cough into the crook of your elbow when you don't have a tissue. ☐

On Alzheimer's

Do not ask me to remember.
Do not try to make me understand.
Let me rest and know you're with me.
Kiss my cheek and hold my hand.
I'm confused beyond your concept.
I am sad and sick and lost.
All I know is that I need you to be with me at all cost.
Do not lose your patience with me.
Do not scold or curse my cry.
I can't help the way I'm acting,
Can't help the way I'm acting,
Can't be different though I try.
Just remember that I need you,
That the best of me is gone.
Please don't fail to stand beside me,
Love me till my life is done. ☐

History in May: Florence Nightingale and Roger Bannister

Wikimedia Commons

The date of May 12, 2022 marks the Two Hundred and Second Anniversary of the birthday of one of the most remarkable women of the 19th Century and into the 20th Century, namely Florence Nightingale, born in 1820, in Florence (she was named after the City), Italy. Florence Nightingale is a household name in many hospitals and homes around the world. She is revered for her dedication to nursing and helping people in distress during her lifetime. Her birthday (12 May) is observed as International Nurses Day.

But what is the story behind this extraordinary woman? Well, there are a number of chapters to her place in history.

Growing up in the Victorian era in Britain, Florence shunned the notion that women weren't expected to work – their role in society was to look after the home in marriage and to have children. Instead, she expressed her heartfelt desire to enter the nursing profession.

Such was her reputation for contributing new ideas on vastly upgrading nursing and sanitation services at a London hospital, that she was asked by the British War Ministry, at age of 34, in 1854, to supervise a team of nurses at a British Military Hospital in Santari, Turkey in the midst of where the Crimean War was taking place. The war was being waged by Britain, France, Germany and other countries against Russia's attempts to expand its influence over the Middle East and the Eastern Mediterranean. Florence and her nurses significantly improved the squalid wards of the hospital resulting in increasing the survival rate of a great number of soldiers who had been seriously injured and/or who were suffering from diseases associated with unsanitary conditions in war. Being fluent in English, French, German and Italian was of enormous benefit to Florence in relating to the recovering soldiers and army officers. History records her tireless work during the War, and she became known as "The Lady with the Lamp" arising from her practice of carrying a lamp around with her when checking up on patients at night. Readers might remember the film of the same title produced in the 1940s, depicting the life of Florence Nightingale. I saw the film in the 1950s and what a lasting impression it made on me.

When Florence returned to England, she was commended by Queen Victoria for her work. Florence went on to establish the Nightingale Training School for Nurses in London from which nurses were sent all over Britain, introducing her views on modern nursing and sanitation methods and training women to become nurses.

Despite her health having been negatively impacted by the stress endured during the Crimean War, Florence, nevertheless, continued to push for further reforms of British Military Hospitals and, indeed, of the medical care system in operation in Britain, and with considerable success.

Florence died of heart failure during her sleep at her residence in London on 13 August 1910 at the age of 90. □

Wikimedia Commons

During the early afternoon of May 6, 1954, news reverberated around the world with the announcement that Roger Bannister, at the age of 25, had become the first athlete in history to clock under 4 minutes for the mile in Oxford, England. But, it must be pointed out, he only just made it; he had run the mile in 3:59.06 – less than a second under 4 minutes.

What a stupendous achievement that was. Bannister, in effect, removed the mental barrier that had existed in the minds of people for so long – that a sub-four-minute-mile could not be run: it was impossible, if not fatal.

But to further note what a great accomplishment this was, it needs to be borne in mind that running was only a hobby for Bannister (he was only an amateur athlete) – his true passion was his medical career which provided him with his livelihood.

Some readers might be able to join me in remembering seeing a news clip of the last 50 yards of Bannister's epic race on British Movietone News in the Cinemas a week or so after the historic event. I seem to recall Bannister collapsing into his trainer's arms at the end.

After his record-breaking race in 1954, Bannister went on to become a World-Renowned Neurologist. He was knighted later in life in recognition of his contribution to medical science and to sport. Sir Roger died in 2018 at the age of 88.

It is interesting to note that Bannister's mile record was broken a little more than a month later, in June 1954, when Australian athlete, John Landy, ran it in 3:58.0; and that in the many decades since numerous other runners also broke the barrier of 4 minutes.

Today, sadly, the mile race (1 609.34m) is no longer an often-run event (probably because of its awkward distance in metres). It is run only on special occasions. The preferred race at athletic meetings these days is the 1 500m track event, for which the world outdoor record is 3: 26.00 held by Hicham El Guerrouj of Morocco since 1991. □

The Fashion Show

On Monday 11 April the Health and Well Being Committee sponsored a Fashion Show which was held in the ORV dining room. Some of our lady residents modelled the Kaftans and Nigerian design wear.

Adelle Van Schalkwyk, owner of L'Adelle, compered the show which showcased her Kaftan collection of immaculately designed and easy-to-wear garments.

Designer Amanda Belkes also showcased her Nigerian Style range.

The ladies attending the show were visibly thrilled by the designs. The models were splendid in their roles and relished in the opportunity.

Contact details and pricing are available from Estelle Visser. ☐

INTERIOR DECORATING

Many people think that interior decoration and design services are a nice-to-have, or a fancy service reserved for the wealthy, but it is not so. In fact, hiring a professional interior decorator and design team saves you time and all the money you would have spent on items that do not work well together.

We make sure that the objects and furniture in the house communicate with each other, respond and balance one another as well.

We provide our clients with a large variety of furniture items, which are on display in our showroom located in Illovo Square Shopping Centre, showing some of the designs that are available to be custom made by our team according to your specifications and individual styles, but are also available for purchase.

Our service encompasses all the aspects on interior decoration, including all aspects of space planning, furniture design, upholstery, manufacturing of curtains and blinds and installation, ensuring that we deliver the same convenient and efficient service every time.

HOW IT WORKS

All you have to do to enjoy our service is tell us what you like and let us handle it from there. We will sit with you for a complete consultation so that we can ensure that all the elements we choose for your space reflects your character, taste and purpose of the space. Thereafter, we will source the materials needed and carry out the full installation.

Mini Pineapple Upside Down Cakes

This is a simple dessert dish that is gorgeous (and DELICIOUS!)

Cake Ingredients

- 2 eggs
- 2/3 cup white sugar
- 4 Tbsp pineapple juice
- 2/3 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 tsp baking powder
- 1/4 tsp salt
- Topping:
- 1/4 cup butter (1/2 stick or 4 Tbsp)
- 2/3 cup brown sugar (packed)
- 1-can pineapple rings
- 6-maraschino cherries

Instructions

Preheat oven to 180 Celsius. Spray your muffin tins with non-stick cooking spray.

In a mixing bowl, add eggs, white sugar, and pineapple juice. Beat for 2 minutes. In a separate bowl, sift together the flour, baking powder, and salt. Add to the wet ingredients and turn mixer back on for 2 minutes.

In a small sauce pan, melt the butter and add the brown sugar. Stir on low heat for one minute.

Spoon a layer of the warm brown sugar mixture into the bottom of each muffin tin, then place a pineapple ring on top. Add a cherry in the middle of each pineapple. Pour cake mixture over to fill muffin tin 3/4 of the way full. If you are using regular muffin tins, you will need to cut down the rings to fit or just use pineapple tidbits.

Bake jumbo cakes for 25 minutes. Bake regular cakes for 20 minutes. If you choose to make a large cake, bake for 22-25 minutes in a 25cm cast iron skillet. The cake is done when a toothpick inserted in the middle comes out clean.

Remove from the oven. Let cool in pan for 3 minutes. Run a knife around the edge of each cake to help loosen in case it sticks a little. Place a wire cooling rack on top, and quickly flip over on top of sheet tray to catch extra drippings.

Place wire rack of cakes on sheet tray to cool. □

Book Review

FROM UNDER A MANGO TREE by Alan Fagan

Retelling true events in this absorbing novel Alan Fagan, brings to life the harsh days of trekking with wagons and oxen, through to the era of harnessing the turbulent Zambezi River into the massive Kariba Dam in Rhodesia (Zimbabwe). With great empathy and understanding of the culture and community life of the intervening years, history is told by Jan as he grows from childhood experiencing the hardships and joys of life, death, love and loyalty.

Central to this tale, taken from the 'library of memories' which had been passed down to the author, is the love and companionship of Jan's dogs, Tonko, Shaka and Spike.

Written with compassion, evocative descriptions of the countryside and authentic characterisations, 'From Under a Mango Tree' is an enthralling, honest, exciting, and often very emotional historical novel. □

A Story for the Soul

For those of you that don't know, my Papa Joe is 85, been faithfully married to my grandma for 60 years, his memory is slipping and he is really slowing down.

Today he asked me to take him to Wal-Mart because he wanted to get out of the house. I was thankful he asked because, as many of us know, he shouldn't be driving. I thought it would also benefit grandma to have the house to herself for a while, not having to worry about grandpa for a few hours.

I watched him, cane in hand, taking the tiniest steps all around Walmart...I had no idea what he was after, just thought he wanted out of the house, but as I observed each item he put in the cart, I noticed a theme, they were some of my grandma's favourite things. He got a bottle of her favourite soda, he carefully picked out a bag of her favourite grapes, he even bought her a small, lemon pie.... and then, my eyes welled with tears as I watched him hobble over to the fresh flowers and pick her the bouquet that had the most purple in it, and on our way home, he insisted we stop and grab a sandwich to take home for grandma's lunch!

May we all take a lesson from Papa Joe, never stop being intentional!!! ☐

Retarded Grandparents

(This was actually reported by a teacher)

After Christmas, a teacher asked her young pupils how they spent their holiday away from school.

One child wrote the following:

We always used to spend the holidays with Grandma and Grandpa.

They used to live in a big brick house but Grandpa got retarded and they moved to Batemans Bay where everyone lives in nice little houses, and so they don't have to mow the grass anymore!

They ride around on their bicycles and scooters and wear name tags because they don't know who they are anymore.

They go to a building called a wreck centre, but they must have got it fixed because it is all okay now. They do exercises there, but they don't do them very well.

There is a swimming pool too, but they all jump up and down in it with hats on.

At their gate, there is a doll house with a little old man sitting in it. He watches all day so nobody can escape. Sometimes they sneak out and go cruising in their golf carts!

Nobody there cooks, they just eat out.

And they eat the same thing every night --- early birds.

Some of the people can't get out past the man in the doll house. The ones who do get out, bring food back to the wrecked centre for potluck.

My Grandma says that Grandpa worked all his life to earn his retardment and says I should work hard so I can be retarded someday too.

When I earn my retardment, I want to be the man in the doll house. Then I will let people out, so they can visit their grandchildren.

PRICELESS! ☐

The Men in Red Show

Saturday 23rd April our residents were entertained with a sing along feast of wonderful nostalgic music when The Men in Red returned to our village.

Our fellow residents Johann Tait, Glanville Craig, Tom Addison, and Dennis Joseph are members of this choir.

Our thanks go to the Entertainment Committee for their part in organising an opportunity to be entertained by these guys again, giving us renditions of well-known and some not so well-known songs.

The tea after the show was scrumptious... a nice ending to a lovely evening.
